History of Nobleton

The village of Nobleton, named after Joseph Noble, began as a settlement about 1812. Other family names like Wellar, Snider, Pringle, Kaake, Hambly, Hawman, Robb, Hill are seen today on street signs or plaques on heritage homes. One of the most familiar landmarks is the Hambly House, originally built of logs and rebuilt after a fire, at the corner of Hwy 27 and King Rd. The majority of the original settlers to the area came from England, Scotland and Ireland. Other home countries included the United States, Holland and Germany.

During those early years, merchants offered the residents of Nobleton a variety of products from the 2 general stores and from the planing mill, which supplied sashes and doors. In the community, services were available from the local post office, 2 blacksmith shops, the local doctor, and 2 telephone companies. Residents could congregate for Sunday Service at the local churches. The arena provided skating; entertainment was available in the music hall, where the Nobleton Community Hall now stands; and weary travellers could find accommodation in either of the 2 hotels.

Location & Transportation

Nobleton is a village in the Township of King. King Township is the largest geographic municipality of the nine located in York Region. Nobleton is situated at the intersection of Highway 27 and King Road. Neighbouring communities include Bolton to the west, King City to the east, Kleinburg to the south, and Schomberg to the north. There is easy access to major provincial highways: north/south routes of Highway 400, Highway 427 and Highway 404; east/west routes of Highway 7, ETR 407 and Highway 9. Public Transportation is provided by GO Transit. A GO bus stops at Highway 27 and King Road twice daily, southbound at approximately 6 a.m. and northbound at approximately 7:00 p.m.

Nobleton has seen many changes and moderate growth over almost 200 years. The community still celebrates its heritage proudly, in local events and in history books written by those dedicated to preserving Nobleton's heritage.
